Our experience working for you...

M. H. Southern recently supplied a selection of speciality timbers to meet an architectural specification for a stunning new log cabin in Cumbria. Preservative treated Siberian Larch was used for the external cladding, whilst Douglas Fir was used for the internal cladding, skirtings and architraves.

UNSORTED SIBERIAN LARCH

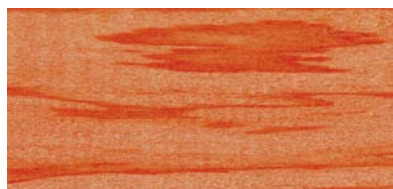

Siberian Larch is a very versatile softwood. Slow grown, it is a dense and durable product making it ideal for cladding, weatherboard and decking applications. In addition, we keep stocks of British Larch and both are very pleasing in appearance and make welcome additions to our range of specialist softwoods.

PITCH PINE SELECTS

This is a strong and durable timber used for ship building, decorative beams and heavy constructional work, with smaller kiln dried sections being used for flooring and quality joinery works. A timber of good appearance and characteristic grain.

WESTERN RED CEDAR

A very durable timber with character which lends itself well for a number of external applications, such as exterior cladding, greenhouse and conservatory manufacturing.

CLEAR DOUGLAS FIR

This is a timber of good strength and durability and is available in merchantable and clear grades. Kiln dried, clear sections work well in both internal and external joinery applications.
